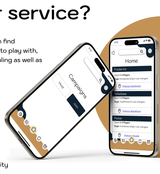
Dungeons District

A user-friendly app, catering to your table top needs.
Made for the players, not the game.

Why use our service?

Players, and also those hosting, often find themselves struggling to find people to play with, keeping track of player order, scheduling as well as keeping track of notes.
Rest assured.
We got you.



How might we address these issues?

Solving not only the player order issue, we have aided in discoverability of players, scheduling and lastly notes from the DM! Dungeon master: the player hosting a session.

Our research that lead to this outcome?

After sending out a questionnaire to the friendly table-top community, we had asked multiple different questions surrounding the players and needs, while also asking how to better their overall experience with the game. This is what their responses entailed:

The insights showed that players in DnD want to organise their sessions or schedule them beforehand, because they don't always have time or it's not always clear but in order to do so, they have to always triple check dates and ultimately get confused or frustrated from these schedules, often missing them as a result of these issues.

The DM's in DnD doesn't want to keep explaining rules or items because there are too many different factors, but most people don't have access to personal information regarding rules or items which is a common problem in most sessions.

The common issue between both the players and the DM's, is that they want more or new people to join campaigns since there are sometimes players that don't always show up, but they don't know where to find people or tell people about their current session.

You spoke, we listened.

Who is this app meant for?

Take, for example, our user persona: David.
He is our average DnD enjoyer

David · Spool

David is a 23 year old man who studies AR. Only had time for a few games of D&D after his long hours of work and university. He likes to participate in outdoor activities and has a lot of friends he plays with.
Hobbies: Playing Boardgames, Hiking, Cooking, Gaming, Drawing as a hobby.

BIOGRAPHY:

Age	23
Gender	Male
Occupation	Student
Location	Wyoming
Education	MR Diploma Wyoming University

PROBLEM STATEMENT:

David struggles finding time to play D&D and misses out on sessions and their details. He also has a hard time playing since they are always changing the order. Because of this, he wishes to have a tool that helps him keep track of the order in which the and his friends have to play since it is never in set order. He also wishes to be kept up to date with the current affairs of the campaign, such as upcoming sessions, deadlines, and notifications. David also wishes to find other people and/or campaigns that he can be a part of, which could add the variable.

CHALLENGES/ASPIRATIONS:

David wants an app that not only keeps track order of attending players, but also organisation and ease to get updates on sessions he missed. He also wishes to take the stress out of the DM's hands, since he feels it is unjustly and unfairly difficult to organise when there's only one and his three friends.

David is a good friend who keeps hosting a lot to organise and keep up to date on what happened in the previous session.

PREFRENCES:

- Playing Out An Important Details
- Scheduling a Viable Time to Play
- Small Player Base
- Keeping Track of the Order in Which He Plays
- Losing Current Notes and Recalling Previous Notes

SOLUTION:

- Tweaking a Session Kick the Rejs and Hosting a Fetlas Section Within the Session Panel
- Pre Rollcalling Sessions that Offer Enough Time for the DM's as well as the Players
- Session Browse Function Within the App to Find Different Sessions/Campaigns
- Hosting a Live Order Function to Dictate Player Order
- Search Function Where a Player can Look for Certain Items, Notes or Sessions.
